As of April 23, 2020, a total of 151 countries (18 more since last week) have planned, introduced or adapted 684 social protection measures in response to COVID-19. This is a ten-fold increase in measures since the first edition of this living paper (March 20). New countries include Angola, Anguilla, Antigua and Barbuda, Aruba, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Belarus, Bermuda, Brunei, Chad, Grenada, Libya, Montserrat, Nigeria, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Seychelles, St Maarten, and UAE.

Figure 1. Number of countries with planned or ongoing social protection measures in response to COVID-19 (March 20-April 23, 2020)

Social assistance transfers are the most widely used class of interventions (60% of global responses, or 412 measures). These are complemented by significant action in social insurance and labor market-related measures (supply-side measures). Among safety nets, cash transfer programs remain the most widely used safety net intervention by governments (table 1 and figure 2). Overall, cash transfers include 222 COVID-related measures representing one-third (32.4%) of total COVID-related social protection programs.

Cash transfers include a mix of both new and pre-existing programs of various duration and generosity. About half (47%) of cash transfers are new programs in 78 countries (reaching 512.6 million people), while one-fifth (22%) of measures are one-off payments. The average duration of transfers is 2.9 months. The size of transfers is relatively generous, or one-fifth (22%) of monthly GDP per capita in respective countries. On average, this is an increase of 86.6% compared to average pre-COVID transfer levels (where data is available for a subset of countries) (figure 3).

Cash transfers are being adapted to COVID-19 response in three ways. This includes expanding coverage, increasing benefits, and making administrative requirements simpler and more user-friendly. Combined, those adaptations benefit over 1.36 billion people. Specifically for cash transfers, Administrative adaptations are occurring in 25 countries (figure 4). For example, anticipation of payments that due at later date (e.g., Malaysia); flexibility in the time of collection (e.g., Algeria); home delivery of cash for seniors (e.g., Armenia); postponement of recertification (e.g., Georgia); and waiving of conditionalities (e.g., Philippines). Increases in benefits among preexisting programs are implemented in up to 33 countries, including transfer value being increased in 24 countries (e.g., Egypt); additional payment cycles taking place in 11 countries (e.g., Chile). Some countries have done both (e.g., Turkey).

Finally, coverage extension is underway in 72 countries: this includes expanding coverage to those not into programs, but still in social registries (e.g., Indonesia), or extending coverage to those partially or not listed in social registries, such as informal sector, self-employed workers (e.g., in two-dozen countries).

Figure 4. Adaptations in cash transfers Vertical expansion Increase in both Only increase in (more generous or adequacy and coverage adequacy [33 countries, adequate transfers) [7 countries, 39 measures] 7 measures Admin adaptation Only coverage increase [25 countries, 72 countries. 113 measures 29 measures] Horizontal expansion (coverage scale up)

Cash transfer programs are more than doubled in coverage, including an average of 152.3% in scale up levels. Preliminary analysis for a subset of cash transfer programs with comparable data, it is possible to estimate the scale up of programs relative to Pre-COVID19 levels. Countries like the Philippines and El Salvador are quadrupling their coverage (in the case of Philippines also via multiple new programs), while even countries in Africa like Mauritania are almost doubling coverage. We will keep updating and expanding this analysis in coming editions.

The average duration of cash transfer programs in 2.9 months. Most programs have a duration of 3 months, with several monthly one-off schemes and some longer programs in a few other cases (figure 6).

In-kind transfers also adapted considerably, especially school feeding programs. These include 20 measures, which have been leveraged in creative ways. With school closures, 368 million children are missing school feeding meals globally. Many adaptations are being rolled out to ensure continuity in provisions of such meals. For example, schools remined open just for food distribution in Chile; Costa Rica established collection points of school meals with perishables/fresh food procured from local farmers; many countries switched to home deliveries of meals, for example Belize; in Guatemala, those home deliveries are organized by parent associations; in Jamaica, home deliveries will be managed by the private sector; and in Kerala state of India, not meals, but "ingredients" are delivered to 300,000 families.

In terms of social insurance, there has been a significant uptick in measures since last week. This includes moving from 134 to 179 measures. Unemployment benefits is the most frequently adopted measure (table 2). Sick leave is present in countries like Algeria, El Salvador, Finland and Lebanon. Unemployment benefits are reported, for example, in Romania, Russia and South Africa. Deferring or subsidizing social contributions are present, among others, in Montenegro and the Netherlands.

Total SI	179

There has been significant expansion also in labor market interventions, including from 78 to 93 global measures. Wage subsidies continue to be an important area of action, especially in the form of wage subsidies (table 3). As in previous editions, we only examine a subset of labor market measures, i.e., supply-side interventions related to workers (i.e., we don't include demand-side measures like capital injection to firms). Wage subsidies account for over half (56%) of the global labor market portfolio, with programs being implemented in Jamaica, Kosovo, Malaysia and Thailand. Activation measures (worker trainings) are also being considered inter alia in Bosnia and Herzegovina, China and Romania.

There is progress across all regions and country income groups. Sub-Saharan Africa includes 4 new countries (such as Nigeria) and 12 novel measures. LAC witnessed an impressive growth in measures from 83 to 113. No new measures were recorded in South Asia. Low-income countries also had 2 new entries and 3 new programs. Overall, middle-income countries continue to be the epicenter of action (table 4).

About this review

This sixth "living paper" edition contributes to the global knowledge on how countries are responding to the pandemic by documenting real-time actions in a key area of response – that is, social protection measures planned or implemented by governments.

For the purpose of this review, we organized interventions by social assistance, social insurance and labor market programs. For the latter measures, we deliberately focused on supply-side programs (e.g., mostly wage subsidies and other activation programs). In most cases, data sources include official information published in government websites, while in many cases we reported information from global and national news outlets. In some cases, information was provided directly by country-based experts, while the full database was validated and integrated by regional and country social protection teams at the World Bank and UNICEF. Overall, findings should be considered preliminary and interpreted with caution.

The information on country-level measures presented in this review is continuously verified, triangulated and enriched, with updated versions being released on a weekly basis (i.e., every Friday) until further notice. This would help provide a "situation room" with a view to inform decisionmakers, practitioners and the broad public about the most recent policy and operational developments in the sphere of social protection responses to COVID-19.

The reminder of the note zooms into a country-by-country examination of measures presented in tabular form. The structure by social assistance, insurance, and labor interventions is accompanied by more granular reporting of specific schemes and their summary description. Sources are provided as weblinks in footnotes.

FASE assists those who have been laid off or lost income due to the Coronavirus; been sent home without payment; seen their income reduced to less than Afl. 950 (US$528) monthly; or have been laid off ¹⁷ . Social insurance	Unemployment benefits	On Monday (23 March) the National Assembly adopted an Emergency Measures and Actions Act, which was later amended. For the moment, the period of the state of emergency is two months, i.e. from 13 March to 13 May. Over this period, the Unemployment Fund will pay 60% of the income of the employees from sectors most heavily influenced by the COVID-19 crisis for up to three months. The Council of Ministers has adopted the criteria and procedures according to which employers will be able to receive support. In addition to employers in sectors, where operations have been suspended as a result of the social distancing measures (tourism, sports, culture, etc.), any other employer that can prove a 20% y/y drop in revenue in March is also eligible for the 60% salary subsidy
	Disability pensions	All medical certificates determining the degree of lost working capacity (the validity of these documents for people below standard retirement age is between 1 and 3 years; working capacity of people above standard retirement age doesn't need to be reassessed) which expire during the period of the state of emergency and have to be renewed, are automatically renewed for the whole period of the state of emergency + 2 months after that. Approximately 75,000 disability pensioners will benefit from that measure.
	Pensions	All pensions of working pensioners will be recalculated officially as of 1 April on the basis of the data in the administrative registers. In Bulgaria, pensioners can work and receive a pension and a salary without restrictions. Now, pensioners are not required to submit any documents and to contact the NSSI's staff. The idea is to limit the number of visitors of the NSSI's offices as a precautionary measure and to reduce the risk COVID-19 spread. Approximately 258 000 pensioners will benefit from that measure.
	Unemployment benefits	Unemployment benefit claims shall be submitted by the claimants through the local employment offices at the same time when they get registered as jobseekers. National Employment Agency (a structure to the Minister of Labour and Social Policy) will inform NSSI through the means of electronic data exchange about the submitted claims. Further measures are under consideration ⁵⁶ .

Netherlands	Social assistance	Cash transfer	The government announced a three-month provision for self-employed persons with financial problems. ²⁰² Implemented by municipalities, it can be applied for in the form of an additional allowance for living expenses and/or operating capital. Depending on household income and composition, the living expenses allowance will top up the income to a maximum of the guaranteed minimum income and does not have to be repaid. To avoid delays in the payment of the allowance, the income of a partner or the assets of the self-employed person will not be taken into account. Support for operating capital will take place in the form of a loan at a reduced interest rate according to the Social Assistance (Self-Employed Persons) Decree (Besluit bijstandverlening zelfstandigen).
	Social insurance	Social security contribution (waiver/subsidy)	Under the Labor Market Act (Improved Equilibrium, or Wet arbeidsmarkt in balans; WAB), the unemployment insurance contribution that employers pay for employees with an open-ended contract is lower than that paid for employees with a flexible employment contract. According to the WAB, the higher unemployment insurance contribution will apply retroactively to permanent employees whose overtime hours amounted to more than 30% during a calendar year. This provision may now lead to unintended effects in sectors where a lot of extra overtime is required as a result of the coronavirus. The government is therefore preparing to introduce an adjustment to eliminate this unintended effect for the 2020 calendar year.

The scheme is designed to help companies that expect to lose at least 20 per cent of their revenue during the pandemic. It will pay employees' wages for three months, up to a maximum of 90 per cent of the company's wage bill, depending on the loss of turnover. In addition to paying wages, the scheme will also pay both the employer and employee pension contribution, something that the Pension Federation, the Labour Foundation and the Dutch Association of Insurers, had requested.

ERTEs - temporary contract suspension and temporary reduction of working hour - in Spain). The following are measures which concern all economic activities affected by the COVID related interventions:

- All persons affected by ERTE will benefit from unemployment benefit, even those who are not entitled to it because they do not have a sufficient contributory period. In addition, those benefiting from such unemployment benefits will not consume the benefit rights already accumulated (i.e. will not account towards maximum benefits).
- Unemployment benefits collected during the state of alert will not count towards unemployment afterwards. In other words, explains the vice-presidency of Social Rights, these people will not have exhausted their unemployment benefits, and if they are dismissed in the future, they will start collecting them from scratch.
- Lifting social security contribution requirements for small and medium businesses who do not lay off workers, and adjusting the social security system contributions made by self-employed workers whose income plummets due to the crisis. (exemption of 75% of employer contribution or 100% for companies with less than 50 employees in so far as the workforce is maintained) (so they've extended existing provisions in case of natural disasters)
- Allows workers to adapt and reduce their working hours, by as much as 100% if necessary, if they need to provide care to dependents
- For the self-employed, access to an extraordinary benefit in relation to cessation of activity is eased when they have had to close their establishments or suspend their services equal to 70% of the regulatory base for one month or until the last day of the month when the mandated state of alert ends. It will affect professionals who see their turnover fall by 75% compared to the previous six months. This period will be assimilated to contributory periods and will not reduce future benefits. This benefit will be compatible with the exemption of payment of fees.
- Companies under redundancy procedures (ERTE) will not pay contributions to the Social Security, to avoid them to dismiss workers²⁹⁸
